Task 1.1 – Informal Letter

Hey Mia,

I just saw the email from the fitness club—it's closing for a whole month! Honestly, I'm pretty disappointed. I was just getting into a routine. I hope they add more equipment and improve the showers. Maybe they can offer online workout sessions while it's closed? Let's suggest something!

Talk soon,

Sara

Task 1.2 – Formal Letter

Dear Manager,

Thank you for informing us about the temporary closure of the fitness center. While I understand that building repairs and equipment upgrades are necessary, I must admit I'm quite disappointed to lose access to the club for an entire month. Regular exercise is an important part of my routine, and I'm sure many other members feel the same.

I hope that during the closure, the management considers offering some alternative options, such as virtual workout classes via Zoom or YouTube. This would help members stay active and feel connected. Another option could be partnering with a nearby gym to allow temporary access at a discounted rate.

As for improvements, I suggest better ventilation in the weight room and more yoga mats in the group exercise area. Updating the locker rooms and improving the water dispensers would also be appreciated.

Thank you for considering member feedback. I look forward to returning to an even better facility.

Sincerely,

Sara Jenkins

Task 2 – Forum Post

In my opinion, learning in a group is generally more effective than learning alone. While individual study has its benefits, group learning offers more opportunities for engagement, idea-sharing, and support.

When you study with others, you are exposed to different perspectives and ways of thinking. For example, in a study group I joined for a history class, one student explained a topic using a timeline, which made it much clearer than how I had understood it before. Group discussions can help clarify doubts quickly, and teaching others also reinforces your own understanding.

Additionally, learning with a group helps keep you motivated. When studying alone, it's easy to lose focus or procrastinate. However, in a group, there is a shared sense of responsibility, which can encourage everyone to stay on track.

That said, studying alone can be useful for tasks that require deep concentration or when preparing for exams. It allows for flexibility and a personal pace.

In conclusion, while both methods have their advantages, I believe that group learning is generally more beneficial because of the collaboration, support, and motivation it provides. Combining both approaches might be the most effective strategy overall.

Dear Organizer,

Thank you for organizing the recent cooking course. I truly enjoyed the experience and wanted to share my feedback.

The best part of the course was the hands-on practice. Learning to prepare Italian pasta and Thai curry from scratch was both fun and educational. The instructor was knowledgeable and approachable, and I appreciated how clearly the steps were explained.

However, I think a few improvements could make future courses even better. Firstly, the class size was a bit too large, which made it difficult at times to get individual attention. Reducing the number of participants or increasing the number of instructors would help. Secondly, printed or digital recipe handouts would be useful so we can try the dishes at home.

Overall, it was a well-run and enjoyable course, and I look forward to attending more in the future.

Best regards,

Emma Thompson

Task 2 – Forum Post

In my opinion, working from home is a better option for most people, especially in today's digital world. It offers more flexibility, improves work-life balance, and can even increase productivity.

Firstly, working from home allows people to manage their time more effectively. For example, without the need to commute, employees can use that extra time to rest or complete tasks, leading to better focus and energy during working hours. A friend of mine who works in IT said he gets more done at home because there are fewer distractions compared to the office.

Secondly, remote work improves work-life balance. People can spend more time with their families or take care of personal matters more easily. This leads to greater job satisfaction and mental well-being.

However, working in an office has its advantages too, such as easier communication and stronger team bonding. In-person meetings can help solve problems faster and improve collaboration.

Still, with today's technology, virtual meetings and team chats make remote communication effective.

In conclusion, while both options have benefits, I believe working from home is more suitable for the modern workplace, especially when combined with occasional office visits. It provides freedom, comfort, and higher productivity.

Dear Dormitory Manager,

Thank you for reaching out and asking for our input. I appreciate your efforts to improve our living conditions.

One change I would suggest is upgrading the internet connection, as many students rely on it for online classes and research. Also, it would be helpful to install better lighting in the study rooms and provide more comfortable chairs in the common areas.

Regarding weekend activities, organizing movie nights, game tournaments, or cultural food events would be exciting. These types of activities can help students relax and build friendships.

Workshops on stress management or job interview skills might also be useful.

Overall, I believe these improvements and events will greatly enhance the student experience in the dormitory. Thank you again for considering our opinions.

Task 2 – Forum Post

In my opinion, social media platforms bring people closer together by making communication easier and helping maintain relationships over long distances.

Firstly, social media allows people to stay connected no matter where they are. For example, I have a cousin who lives abroad, and we keep in touch regularly through Instagram and video calls on WhatsApp. Without social media, we would probably lose contact. It also helps people reconnect with old friends and classmates, which wouldn't be possible otherwise.

Secondly, social media provides a platform for people to share their lives, opinions, and experiences. This can create a sense of community and support, especially for those who may feel isolated. During the COVID-19 pandemic, for instance, many people turned to social media to stay in touch, join online events, and share important information.

However, it's true that social media can sometimes lead to misunderstandings or feelings of jealousy. People may compare themselves to others or argue online. Still, I believe these issues depend more on how individuals use the platforms.

In conclusion, while social media has some downsides, it mainly brings people closer by helping them connect, communicate, and share their lives more easily.

Dear Library Coordinator,

Thank you for reaching out to library members for suggestions. I truly appreciate the opportunity to share my thoughts.

Firstly, I believe the library should expand its collection of audiobooks and e-books, as many users now prefer digital formats for convenience. Adding more contemporary fiction, especially by diverse authors, would also attract younger readers. Including more academic materials, such as test preparation books and subject-specific references, would be helpful for students.

As for new services, organizing weekend reading clubs or monthly workshops on writing, public speaking, or digital literacy could greatly benefit the community. These events would not only promote a love of reading but also help people connect and learn new skills.

Thank you again for considering members' opinions. I hope my suggestions are useful and help improve our already wonderful library.

Task 2 – Forum Post

In my opinion, schools should strike a balance between academic subjects and practical skills, but there's a strong case for giving more emphasis to practical skills like cooking, finance, and first aid. These are essential for everyday life and personal development.

For example, learning basic financial literacy—like budgeting, saving, and understanding credit—could prevent young adults from making costly mistakes later on. I know someone who struggled with debt after college because they never learned how to manage money effectively. If schools taught these skills, it would set students up for a more stable future.

Cooking is another vital skill that promotes independence and healthy living. Knowing how to prepare nutritious meals instead of relying on fast food can have long-term health benefits, as I've seen with friends who've adopted healthier habits after learning to cook in a home economics class. First aid is also crucial. In emergencies, knowing how to respond can save lives. Schools already teach subjects like math and science, but practical skills like these would equip students with tools they'll use every day.

In conclusion, while academic knowledge is important, integrating more practical skills into the curriculum would better prepare students for real-world challenges and contribute to their well-being.

Dear HR Team,

Thank you for giving employees the opportunity to share suggestions regarding the new office space. I'm excited about the move and appreciate your efforts to create a better work environment.

One important feature I would recommend is improved natural lighting. It helps boost focus and creates a more positive atmosphere. A quiet zone or designated focus area would also benefit employees who need to concentrate without distractions.

Additionally, having small breakout areas or informal meeting spots could encourage better collaboration among teams. A comfortable lounge with a coffee machine or snack station would also support short breaks and help recharge energy during busy days.

Lastly, it would be useful to have sufficient storage space and ergonomic furniture to ensure comfort and organization.

I hope these ideas help as you design the new space. Thank you again for including us in this important transition.

Task 2 – Forum Post

In my opinion, online learning can be as effective as traditional classroom learning, but it depends on several factors like the learning environment, the subject matter, and the learner's self-discipline.

Online learning offers flexibility, allowing students to access materials at their own pace and from anywhere in the world. For instance, platforms like Coursera or Khan Academy provide courses from top universities, making education more accessible and personalized to each learner's needs.

However, traditional classroom learning offers direct interaction with instructors and peers, fostering social learning and providing immediate feedback. For example, in subjects like mathematics or science, the ability to ask questions in real-time and collaborate with classmates can significantly enhance understanding.

The key difference is that online learning requires greater self-motivation and time management skills, which may be challenging for some students. Traditional learning environments, on the other hand, provide a structured setting that can keep students engaged and focused.

In conclusion, both forms of learning have their strengths, and when combined, they can offer a well-rounded and effective educational experience.

Hey Lily,

I just got back from my trip and stayed at a really nice hotel! The room was clean and the staff were super friendly. I especially loved the rooftop pool. But the breakfast could've been better—it lacked variety. Still, I'd stay there again. Let's plan a trip together soon!

Task 1.2 – Formal Letter

Dear Hotel Management,

Thank you for your message. I recently stayed at your hotel during my holiday and would like to share my feedback.

Overall, I had a pleasant experience. The room was clean, well-maintained, and very comfortable. I especially appreciated the friendly and helpful staff, who made me feel welcome throughout my stay. The rooftop pool was a highlight—it offered great views and a relaxing atmosphere.

However, I believe there is room for improvement in the breakfast service. While the quality of food was decent, the options were limited, especially for vegetarian guests. Including more fresh fruits, healthier choices, and some international dishes would greatly enhance the experience.

I would also recommend adding more signage around the hotel to help guests find amenities more easily.

Thank you once again for your hospitality. I look forward to staying with you again in the future.

Sincerely,
Nina Carter

Task 2 – Forum Post

I believe advertisements do influence people significantly, often more than they realize. In today’s world, ads are everywhere—on TV, social media, billboards, and even in our apps. They’re designed not just to inform but to persuade, often shaping consumer behavior and preferences. For example, targeted ads on platforms like Instagram or YouTube use data to tailor content to individual tastes, making products seem more desirable by showcasing them at the right moment.

One notable example is the success of fast food chains using advertisements that appeal to emotional triggers, like comfort or convenience. Studies have shown that children, in particular, are highly susceptible to these messages, often making food choices based on ads they've seen rather than nutritional value.

While ads can be informative, they also create unrealistic expectations. Beauty product ads, for instance, often promote an idealized version of beauty that many people feel pressured to achieve, contributing to low self-esteem and body image issues.

Overall, while advertisements can inform and offer convenience, they undeniably influence decisions in subtle ways that sometimes have negative consequences. It's important for consumers to be more aware of these influences and make more conscious choices.

Firstly, I believe adding more shaded seating areas would greatly benefit all visitors, especially the elderly and parents watching their children at the playground. The current seating is limited and often exposed to direct sunlight.

Secondly, installing a small outdoor fitness area with basic exercise equipment would encourage a healthier lifestyle and make the park more appealing to all age groups. A dedicated walking or jogging path would also be appreciated.

Additionally, improving lighting in the evening and adding more waste bins could enhance safety and cleanliness. A small café or refreshment kiosk could also provide a social hub for park users.

Thank you again for involving the public in this process. I look forward to seeing the improvements.

Task 2 – Forum Post

I believe that while space exploration is important, governments should prioritize solving pressing problems on Earth first. The challenges we face—like poverty, climate change, healthcare, and education—require immediate attention and resources. For example, millions of people worldwide still lack access to clean water and basic healthcare, and addressing these issues can have an immediate, tangible impact on improving lives.

That being said, space exploration does bring long-term benefits, such as technological advancements and new scientific knowledge. The development of satellite technology has led to better weather forecasting and communication systems, while space research has contributed to innovations like GPS and medical imaging. However, these benefits should not come at the expense of addressing Earth's urgent issues.

In the end, governments can strike a balance by allocating funds for both—investing in space while also focusing on solving critical issues here at home. The key is to ensure that the allocation of resources is proportionate to the immediate needs of the population and the long-term benefits that space exploration can provide. Prioritizing Earth first doesn't mean abandoning space exploration, but rather finding a responsible way to do both.

Task 1.2 – Formal Letter

Dear Canteen Manager,

Thank you for asking for student feedback regarding the menu update. I appreciate your effort to improve the dining experience on campus.

As a regular customer, I would like to suggest a few additions. First, it would be great to have more healthy meal options, such as grilled chicken wraps, vegetable stir-fry, and fresh salads. Currently, most choices are quite heavy and fried, which doesn't suit everyone's diet.

In addition, including a wider variety of vegetarian, vegan, and halal dishes would make the canteen more inclusive for students with dietary restrictions. Offering affordable meal combos, including a drink and snack, could also be popular.

Finally, I recommend adding a feedback box or digital form so students can continue to share their ideas regularly.

Thank you again for considering our input. I look forward to seeing the updated menu soon.

Task 2 – Forum Post

I believe people should prioritize work-life balance over focusing solely on their career. While professional success is important, overworking can lead to burnout, stress, and even a decline in overall well-being. For instance, research has shown that employees who maintain a healthy work-life balance are often more productive, creative, and engaged at work. Companies like Google and Microsoft have recognized this and implemented flexible work policies to support their employees' personal lives, ultimately benefiting both the workers and the organization.

Focusing too much on one's career at the expense of personal time can also strain relationships and diminish personal happiness. A workaholic mindset may result in missing out on important life moments, such as spending time with family or pursuing hobbies that bring joy. For example, a person who spends long hours at work might miss their child's school play or a friend's wedding, which can affect their emotional health and relationships.

In the long run, a balanced approach—where both career goals and personal time are valued—leads to a more fulfilling and sustainable life. It's not about choosing one over the other, but finding a harmony that supports both professional growth and personal happiness.

Task 1.2 – Formal Letter

Dear Public Transport Department,

Thank you for inviting feedback on the current bus routes. I use your service daily and appreciate the efforts to improve public transport in our area.

One issue I've noticed is the overcrowding on buses during morning and evening rush hours. Increasing the frequency of buses, especially between 7:00–9:00 AM and 5:00–7:00 PM, would greatly improve the experience for daily commuters.

Also, many students and office workers travel to the university area, but the nearest stop requires a long walk. A new route or an extension that goes closer to the campus would be helpful.

Lastly, I suggest better synchronization between different route timings to reduce waiting times during transfers. Displaying real-time bus tracking on a mobile app or digital screens at major stops could also enhance service reliability.

Thank you again for considering public input. I look forward to seeing the improvements soon.

Sincerely,

Ali Raza

Task 2 – Forum Post

I believe it's better to have a few close friends rather than many acquaintances. While having a large circle of friends can be fun and offer variety, it's the deep, meaningful connections that truly enrich our lives. Close friends are the ones who truly understand you, support you during tough times, and share life's most significant moments with you. For example, when going through a personal challenge, it's often the close friends who are there to offer genuine support and advice, not just surface-level interaction.

Having a few close friends also allows for stronger, more authentic relationships. It's difficult to maintain deep connections with too many people, as true friendship requires time and emotional investment. Studies have shown that quality friendships are linked to better mental health and overall happiness. Someone with just a few trusted friends is more likely to feel supported, valued, and secure in their social circle.

While having many friends can provide a wide range of social experiences, the depth and trust in a few close friendships are far more rewarding in the long run. It's these relationships that provide stability and fulfillment, far beyond the fleeting nature of many casual friendships.
